Citysearch Editorial Review

By Tim Piai

Workingman's bar with a great view of the city's industrial past.

The Scene

This converted-house bar sits on a lonely stretch of the Cuyahoga River, halfway up the hill on Columbus Street. It's walls are lined with cheap but nostalgic posters from the city's past.

The Draw

The view of downtown makes the journey to this joint well worth it. There's a super-sized lift bridge in the foreground and a colorful skyline to hold your gaze. It's a flattering snapshot of an industrial city. Local boy Joe Walsh and his classic-rock counterparts fill the jukebox, and anchoring the back corner is a

Insider Tips

Where to Sit

If available, grab one of the barstools directly in front of the big picture window; plug in five bucks on the jukebox, grab a local beer (POC, Crooked River or Great Lakes on draft) and enjoy the scenery.
